film movies at its free level. Granted, most of these are new to List B, but there are some quality movies hidden there. In addition to the free movies curated by Google, there are thousands of movies on the site that won't show unless you search for them directly. If you're looking for a particular title, especially an older one, it's worth performing a quick search on YouTube to see if anyone has published it. These are not always uploaded by the rights holders of the film, and many of them are divided into episodes and playlists, but as they say, beggars cannot be chosen. Finding free movies on YouTube has become more difficult lately, as more rights holders are opting to offer their rental movies through the service, and YouTube also has subscription levels like YouTube Premium and its live TV streaming service, YouTube TV. Still, you'll find plenty to watch, especially if your standards aren't too high in terms of current quality. Vimeo YouTube might be the largest video accommodation site, but Vimeo is probably the best. Yes, they're words of struggle, but Vimeo has the muscle to back them up. The site has a clean design that is devoid of ads and benefits from an active user community that is widely considered more professional and constructive than YouTube's. From this community emerges a lot of great short original films and feature films. Vimeo also has an on-demand section where users can buy long-running movies and TV shows. Most of these are produced independently by Vimeo users, but some offers are produced by major studios as well. Either way, Vimeo is a great place to find movies high quality. The Roku channel When Roku initially launched its free and ad-supported Roku channel, it was not technically eligible for this summary because you had to have one of the company's streaming media devices to watch it. Roku devices certainly won't break the bank, but they're not free. Now, however, the Roku channel is available to anyone, via the web, as well as through the company's free apps for iOS and Android. The service has more than 10,000 titles to choose from, choose from, such as Con Air, Boyz n the Hood, Must Love Dogs and Police Academy. You'll need to create a free Roku account before you can see it, but it's a fast and painless process. If you ever decide to expand your options, the Roku Channel is now home to several premium subscription options, including Showtime, Epix and Starz. The Roku channel is available in the United States and Canada. Plex Free Movies and TV Shows Plex is best known as a versatile and easy way to manage and view your private collection of movies, music, photos and other media. However, in 2019 the company launched its own free ad-supported streaming service with a collection of movies and TV shows from studios such as MGM, Warner, Lionsgate and Legendary. It is available worldwide, although the selection of titles will vary greatly by region. You can access the movie and program collection from a browser, or on any of the large devices that support Plex client software, such as Apple TV, Roku, smart TVs, etc. All you need is a free Plex account and you're ready to go. For those who already use Plex as their media server, free ad-supported options can be added to existing server categories, making the experience completely seamless. Pluto TV Although it may not be as well known as previous services, Pluto TV remains worthy of your attention. Not only does it host free movies on demand, but it's also a free live TV streaming service, hosting selected content over the web. While channels vary wildly, we're focused here on movies. Pluto TV currently has multiple live movie channels, perfect if you want to watch something but don't know what. There are two general purpose movie channels, and the rest focuses on specific genres or categories, including Action Movies, Flicks of Fury, Horror 24/7, Classic Movies, Film Noir, Gravita Movies and The Asylum. The service works in the U.S., as well as in many international locations. Pluto TV's on-demand movie library is relatively small and spins frequently, but offers as much variety as its live movie channels. It is also available on a total of devices in addition to your computer, including Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Roku devices and more. For more information about Pluto TV, see our comprehensive service guide. Tubi TV Another promising, Tubi is very similar to Sony Crackle, as it offers free movies and TV episodes. No matter what device you use, you're most likely to be able to watch Tubi, as it's available on Android, iOS, Roku, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Samsung Smart TV, Sony Smart TV, PlayStation 4, Xbox One and the web. As with the vast majority of services on this list, you'll need to see some but that's what keeps the service free. Tubi has content from more than 200 partners, including NBCUniversal, which brings with it nearly 400 classic titles such as Xena: Warrior Princess, Hercules: The Legendary Journeys, The A-Team, Punky Brewster, and the original versions of P.L., The Bionic Woman and Transformers. Cult classics such as Assault on Precinct 13, Sleepaway Camp and C.H.U.D., along with cult classics such as 10 Cloverfield Lane and No Country for Old Men, can also be found in the growing catalog. If you use this service to complement Netflix instead of replacing it, the No section on Netflix will help you find new and interesting movies to watch. Independent Movies & Documentaries SnagFilms Snagfilms is an on-demand video site that sports a selection of movies that can't be found anywhere else on the web. Founded in 2008, it has amassed around 10,000 independent documentaries and narrative films. There are plenty of rare gems to see here, and since the founders have worked to establish dozens of associations, there are also plenty of different streaming devices that support SnagFilms for free. The service is currently available as a free app for iOS and Android, but is also compatible with various Roku devices, Kindles and a number of other streaming devices. The main website is also very easy to navigate. Snagfilms is available internationally, but some titles are only available in the United States and Canada. Kanopy Like Hoopla, Kanopy is not only free to use, but also commercial-free if you have a library card. Originally founded in 2008 in Australia as an educational tool, Kanopy now offers a library of more than 30,000 films through its partnerships with more than 200 libraries. There is a great focus on independent free movies and documentaries (the company even has access to many recent movies from the A24 catalog), but you'll find all kinds of movies available, and even more are on the road thanks to an agreement that will see the entire catalog of filmmaker Fred Wiseman coming to the service. Kanopy is available internationally, but content may vary by location. Top Documentary Films Love Documentaries? So do we. You know what they say, the truth is stranger than fiction. The top documentary top documentary is, hands down, the best place for documentaries. Not all selections are feature film, but a good documentary doesn't have to be long, some of the best are under the 60-minute mark. With a library of over 3,000 movies, the site also has a simple, straightforward design and categorizes all your movies based on the theme, making it easy to find something you're interested in right away. The content is not hosted on the site, but has been selected and embedded from other sites such as YouTube, Vimeo, Daily Motion, etc. It's available internationally, but not all content will work in all locations. Sources for classic movies Archive.org Chances are, you're reading this article because you're looking for a place to newly released movies online. While there's nothing wrong with that, you definitely shouldn't ignore all the fantastic old movies the Internet has to offer. Archive.org offers a true treasure trove of ancient movies that you've probably never heard of, as well as a you'll recognize. The Archive, which is also home to the famous Wayback Machine that shows what the Internet was like before, has silent movies, black-and-white horror movies, dark sci-fi movies and a variety of other movies. They may not have all the fancy CGI we've all gotten used to, but occasional recoil is a great way to mix things up. Open Culture Open Culture is designed to be your one-stop shop for all things free and cultivated. The site offers hundreds of free online classes to enroll, thousands of free eBooks to read, and hours and hours of lectures by prominent figures like Carl Sagan and Leonard Bernstein. It also offers a total of free movies. Here you'll find everything from silent movies and Hitchcock-led projects to westerns and film noir. The site even houses some early short films by legends such as Quentin Tarantino and Stanley Kubrick. Open culture can be difficult to navigate, but with over 1,000 free movies available, it's definitely worth the slog. Big Five Glories If the name seems a little cheesy, that's because the people behind the project spent their time compiling hundreds of free movies from the 1920s to the 1950s, also known as the Hollywood Golden Age, rather than creating fashionable and daring names. (If you're curious, it's a reference to the old big five movie theaters: 20th Century Fox, RKO Pictures, Paramount Pictures, Warner Bros., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.) If your idea of a fun weekend is to relax and watch Turner Classic Movies, you'll dig Big Five Glories. All movies are considered public domain, so there are no restrictions on availability. Retrovision Retrovision is another public domain site that features hundreds of classic movies from several different eras. The classic word might be ready for interpretation — there are some movies here that were made as recently as last year, and not all Retrovision movies are of high quality — but there are still a lot of good things here. Retrovision is also a well-designed site that allows users to filter based on gender. It is also not limited to feature film films, as there is a robust collection of classic TV shows to choose from. Shocker Internet Drive-In Shocker Internet Drive-In is a bit niche, and its website seems to have been made in the 1990s, but it's a great resource. The site is updated weekly with featured horror classics, which are then available for free download as WMV files on the Snack Bar website. The site is a fun little explosion of the past, with weekly shows framed in a digital entrance. Users can also purchase DVD copies of any movie on the website for only $3. If you miss the Times of the Internet when it was more like the Wild West and everything was less polished, this could be for you. The downside of so many different services being available is that if you have a movie in mind but don't know where to watch it, you have a lot of different catalogs to vade through the hope of That. Fortunately, as long as you have a smartphone, you probably have access to a tool that can help you. The Apple TV app, which is available on iOS, as well as several other platforms, including Apple TV, Roku, Amazon Fire TV, as well as LG and Samsung smart TVs, allows you to search over 50 different streaming services. For Android users, the Google Play Movies & TV app offers similar functionality, although the number of connected services is smaller. Roku devices now have a Featured Free section that offers a curated selection of the best free content on the platform, whether you have a specific channel installed or not. This is in addition to your existing cross-service search, although most of what you'll find will be available for purchase or rental or you'll be on a service that requires a subscription. Either way, while these tools can't guarantee you'll find a way to see what you're looking for for free, they can be a good place to start. Editors' Recommendations Recommendations
